You don't often picture the wilderness when you think of LA. But there's actually seven hundred thousand acres of forest in Los Angeles County. In fact, it's home to the the largest contiguous wilderness in the lower forty-eight. It's also home to the media capitol of the world. This Southern Californian duality runs deep in the Los Angeles bred band The Alpine Camp and created their signature sound, "Jamericana"...Americana X Jam.

The band is comprised of bass, drums, guitar, piano, pedal steel and banjo. The Alpine Camp could hang with the bluegrass crowd if it wasn't for the drummer. You could also expect Gram Parsons to waltz through the door since they can chicken pick with the best. But, at its core, the group is an Americana Jam outfit with a focus on songwriting. Their live shows showcase the band's improvisational prowess and run the gambit from ethereal soundscapes to balls to the wall shredding, all framed within the context of the great American songbook.

Their latest full length release Hybrid, is a collection of originals along with live performances showcasing the band's aptitude for improvisation. "With Hybrid they get the best of both worlds," said Chris Bell "It's as close as you can get to our live show."

The band started as a way for Bell and songwriting partner Charles Etienne to continue their lifelong musical partnership. What started as a one off project, blossomed to include some of the most deft players in Southern California. "I'm not sure why we get these guys to play with us." said Etienne. "I like to think its cause they like the tunes and the freedom, 'cause we sure don't pay 'em much."

THE ALPINE CAMP seems to think jam and roots can coexist, and so do their fans. Since you can ski and go to the beach in the same day in Southern California, maybe they're right...
